Advancing patient-centered value frameworks for novel therapeutics in rare disease

On demand
Rare Beyond the Square

While scientific advances have enabled the development of novel therapeutics to tackle genetic and rare diseases, healthcare infrastructure has struggled to keep pace in providing sustainable pathways to access for patients receiving them. Compounded with the high cost of development with limited markets, this has created an increasingly complex landscape for rare disease patients and companies looking to gain market access for their products. Hear about the current landscape for rare disease reimbursement access, where key challenges exist in developing sustainable pathways, and what types of new value frameworks and assessment models are being discussed to address them. This panel will take place as part of RARE Beyond the Square at Biotech Showcase hosted by Global Genes.

Investment, Commercialization, and Value Recognition: The AI Healthcare Hurdle

Digital Medicine & Medtech Showcase

There was a point in the last five years that simply putting "AI" in a company name immediately demanded unicorn level investments. As the field has progressed, and now is widely recognized as possessing vast potential, AI-enabled healthcare investors, innovators and entrepreneurs struggle to answer the seemingly simple question of "What are we making?". This panel will consider the challenges, opportunities, and nuances of investing in and creating value around this new generation of discovery and development tools. Representing both sides of the coin, investor and fundraiser, panelists will seek to answer these questions among others to guide future stakeholders in navigating this complex issue.
